Editorial.

Hark, Ye Knockers! Bring forth your hammers and proceed to knock. For several weeks, we have noticed a knocking expression on your benign countenances, and at last patience has its reward, for we do herewith present the much heralded 'Monticola.' Knock and be exceeding glad; for great will be the vanity thereof. The 'Monticola' is here, but its compilers, where are they?

The editors have taken to the tall and 'uncut' to repent of their folly in undertaking the work; the business manager, to escape his creditors, vanished between two days, and no trace of him can be found; the members of the board have gone into hiding, where they will remain until the storm shall have spent its fury.

Throughout the book will be found knocks and rubs in verse and picture. Gentles all, we have tried to be lenient with you and the gentle reminders of your peculiarities are given with not a whit of ill-will or disrespect, but rather in a spirit of friendliness. Be like the Southern Colonel, who, on being given some cherries preserved in brandy, said, "I prize the gift not for the value of the fruit, but for the spirit in which it was given."

This year closes another epoch in the history of the West Virginia University. In every department a marked increase in fidelity and loyalty has been noticed. Our athletics have been a source of pride. Last year's base-ball team was above the average college team and did a creditable season's work. The track team was the best in our history and the showing we made at the meet in Pittsburg ranked us a leader in that department of athletics. Anthony McCue, it will be remembered, carried off the field championship. In foot-ball we were badly handicaped from the start through lack of material, but the record made by the team was one of which we need not be ashamed, and is a credit to the university. The basket-ball team kept up the pace set by its predecessors, and, for the first time in the history of the institution, finished the season with cash ahead. The glee club stands without a parallel. The various literary societies have had more enthusiasm than ever; and the debating teams were exceptionally strong.

The work of getting out an annual is arduous even when there is harmony and union among the students. But when this harmony is broken and strife is rampant, the work is more difficult. One thing only happened this year which marred our happiness; namely, the Fraternity fracas. Since this trouble affected the 'Monticola' more or less, we cannot refrain from saying a word or two. Certain Fraternities, because of grievances, real or imaginary, withdrew from participation in all university affairs and forbade their members to remain on the 'Monticola' Board. Furthermore, they refused to allow their pictures to be inserted in this book. We have carried on the work without them, and have not yielded to impulse and cartooned them or ridiculed them in verse, which has been expected; but we have treated them as apart from the university, according to their desire. While lamenting the whole affair, we wish to condemn it in the strongest language possible, regardless of where the blame may rest. We believe that the Fraternities are on the wrong track and are staining the fair name of their university. Why not forget our imagined grievances, and, as a unit, work to place the name of our Alma Mater where it should be, among the fairest of the fair?

The Board wishes to acknowledge its indebtedness and to express its gratitude to Messrs. Moore and Foreman, alumni of the school, for their work so cheerfully given.

IN DEDICATING this humble book, we have tried to choose a man truly representative of our Alma Mater and in glancing about among its alumni we decided on one who has been noted for his manly qualities, and who has always held the fair name of his Alma Mater above reproach. This book is respectfully dedicated to West Virginia University's first graduate, Judge Marmaduke Herbert Dent, Grafton, West Virginia.

Marmaduke Herbert Dent.

Monticola

Marmaduke Herbert Dent was born at Granville, W. Va., April 18th, 1849. His entire school life was spent in our own University town and he graduated from the University in 1870 at the head of his class, also at the foot.

Judge Dent's life has been one devoted to the interests of his state and fellowmen and throughout his eventful career he has ever held most dear the qualities that make a man. After graduation he taught school two years and then entered the Clerk's office of the Circuit and County Courts where he remained three years, during which time he was Commissioner of accounts and Commissioner in Chancery. In 1875 he opened law offices in Grafton and a year later married Mary Jones Wade and took up his residence in Grafton where he has resided ever since. Two children were born, Carrie Louise, wife of Professor Robert A. Armstrong of West Virginia University and Herbert Warder who is associated with his father in the practice of law.

Judge Dent has been held in high esteem by his own political party. He has also had the respect of other parties. In 1876 he received the nomination for prosecuting attorney; in 1892 he was elected Judge of the Supreme Court of Appeals in which office he served for twelve years, when he was defeated for re-election; and in 1906 he was honored with the nomination for congress by the democratic party.

He has now retired from politics and is devoting himself to the practice of his chosen profession in the higher courts of law. Although he has given his life to his state he has found time to attend to things of higher importance and is an active worker in the Church of God. He is a member and an elder in the Presbyterian Church of Grafton and Superintendent of the Sabbath school and is preparing himself when 'life's fever is over' 'to fold the drapery of his couch about him and lie down to pleasant dreams' not to say goodnight but in some happier clime to bid those long lost to sight, but to memory dear, a glad goodmorning.

FRANK COX.

Frank Cox was born near Morgantown in Monongalia County, West Virginia, June 18, 1862. At an early age he entered the West Virginia University and graduated with the class of '83, receiving a LL. B. degree. On his twenty-first birthday he was admitted to practice law at the Monongalia bar. In 1888 he became a member of the well known law firm of Cox & Baker. The same year he was elected Prosecuting Attorney of Monongalia County. Governor Atkinson, in 1899, appointed him Judge Advocate with the rank of Brigadier General, which position he held for two years. When the World's Fair was held at St. Louis he was made a member of the West Virginia Exposition Commission. On account of his legal talent and ability as a lawyer he was nominated by the Republican party as a candidate for Judge of the Supreme Court of Appeals and was elected in the fall of 1904. Shortly after becoming a member he was chosen by his colleagues as President of the Court. After having been on the bench for two years he resigned his position to resume his law practice in connection with Mr. Baker. Last year, in recognition of his services and attainments, he was chosen President of the W. V. U. Alumni Association, which position he still holds.

CLARK W. MAY.

Clark W. May, born on a farm at Griffithsville, Lincoln County, West Virginia, July 14, 1869; educated in the common schools of Lincoln County; completed the law course at the University of West Virginia, June 1894, and at once began the practice of law at Hamlin, in his native county. In 1896 he was elected Prosecuting Attorney of Lincoln County, in which capacity he served for four years. In 1900 he was elected a senator in the legislature of the State for the old seventh district, composed of the counties of Lincoln, Logan, Mingo, Raleigh, Wyoming, McDowell and Mercer. In the legislative session of 1901, although the youngest member of the body, he was made chairman of the judiciary committee of the senate and served throughout the entire session with satisfaction to that body, so much so that at the 1903 session he was unanimously nominated by his party associates for the office of President of the Senate, and was elected to that position. On his 35th birthday, at Wheeling, he was nominated by the Republican State Convention for the office of Attorney General, to which he was elected at the following November election. His term as Attorney General will expire March 3, 1909.

Senior Medic History

Having completed the work in the Medical Department of W. V. U., the Sophomore class of 1905 cast their garments about them and journeyed into a distant land, even beyond the mountains and to the seaside where the tide regularly ebbs and flows and the seagulls fan the waves. Here we took up the work anew in the College of Physicians and Surgeons as mighty Juniors. Some of our men, being mistaken for Freshmen, were called upon to show their ability as swimmers in the Chemical Laboratory tank by the second year class, but it did not take many minutes for us to demonstrate our superiority over the underclassmen. After this incident the days flew by with astonishing rapidity and we were all "plugging" for the final Junior Exams. When the Springtime came and the flowers were blooming we were called to account for the seed that had been sown amongst our cerebral convolutions. When the harvesting was over it was found that some of the seeds had fallen by the wayside, but the greater part of them had fallen on fertile ground and had yielded abundantly. It was found that we as a body had reached the first rank and that one of our number had so acquitted himself that he was second to none in all the class. So ended our first year's work in Baltimore.

When the roll was called at the beginning of our Senior year, every man was in his place prepared to win laurels for himself and for W. V. U. At the present time, we find no physical signs or clinical symptoms of disappointment on the faces of our men. On the contrary we note all the marks of success and even the diminutive tow-headed "Kid" Taylor, says he is going to give the gold medal to his baby Elizabeth, to assist her in cutting her teeth.

We have fought a good fight; we have almost run our course, but before we say good bye to college life we desire to record the characteristics of some of the boys.

Pearcy believes fresh air is the greatest prophylactic known, and often goes to Lutherville and other suburban towns.

Post and John Corbin are the "champeen" duckpin bowlers—High score 46.

Kell and Mahone have made vague and effectual efforts to grow VanDyke beards.

Campbell is walking in the trodden paths.

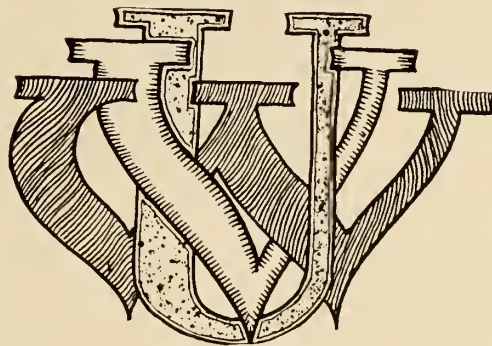

Flowers has become a Benedict and is as happy as Monticola "a little boy with a red wagon." The Historian feels like saying to the others, "Go thou and do likewise."

Talkington believes in studying medicine and attending lectures when it is convenient to do so.

As this year completes our study of medicine and we must leave our Alma Mater we bid a last farewell to all our friends who have been so true in our college life. It is with regret that we say good-bye to the "old gold and blue" and the two years which we spent within her walls shall be to us always the most pleasant memory.

C. M. BENNETT.

Bennett was the fashionable member of the Junior Board, the one who had supper at a late hour. Along about seven o'clock, Wednesday evenings, when Monticola business began to get warm, Bennett, pulling out his watch would announce, "Well, I've got to go home to supper," and go, he did.

E. S. BOCK.

Here is one of the busiest students in the University. "Teddie" may be seen in the Library any time in the vicinity of Professor Cox's reserve shelf. He has taken almost every course that professor offers. On the side, Bock is Assistant Editor-in-chief of the Athenaeum, and one of the Monticola editors.

C. A. BOWERS.

You see in Bowers one of the most daring men in the University. During the winter examinations, he was overheard explaining to a co-ed when and how to use French conditional sentences. As a reward he is being prominently mentioned for the Hall Fame in the Carnegie Hero Association.

JAMES S. BROYLES.

Broyles is a mechanical genius who will some day startle the world. He spends most of his time over in the Mechanical Hall, tinkering away at some intricate bit of machinery. His spare moments are given to French, in which he is particularly proficient.

G. A. COLLIER.

Here is a man noted for his quietness. He was never known to make a noise, but in his unassuming way is quite a stickler for the ladies. His smile would charm any lady, in fact he is a regular Hobson.

ERNEST A. BRUCE.

You have heard, no doubt, of "angels unawares." Such an angel (?) is Bruce. No one had dreamed of connecting him with Robert Bruce of Scotland, until the Junior Class meeting last fall, when Pow in a burst of mighty eloquence, informed us of that fact. Bruce, is the hustling business Manager of this Annual.

Monticola
'08.

G. B. FOLK.

G. B. Folk is a graduate of Shepardstown Normal. Such is his faith in that institution of learning, that we are told that he expected to enter the Senior class of the University. Needless to say his expectations were not realized. George, on the whole, is a pretty good fellow, though we have yet to discover that he is related to Governor Folk of Missouri.

VIRGINIA FOULK.

Felicissima, pulcherrima, sapientissima Phella Foulk! A tintinnabulous onomatopoeic conversationalist! A magnetiferous perscrutatorious bookverous student! A suave, urbane, subventitious Junior! Verbosity recommendatory to her preponderant mentality is proposterousness. The two significant things yet remain to be said; she frequently flies off "at a tangent" and has been "down East to school."

THOS. B. FOULK.

When Tom came to W. V. U. he was a quiet little boy, but now, his manner and style is such to cause people to stop and stare and ask, "Is that the President?" Tom, you know, is the base-ball manager this year. Is that the cause?

MAUD L. FULCHER.

Behold in this young lady a school-mar'm, who is not only pretty but amiable. Miss Fulcher is one of our finest students, the pride of Dr. Callahan's heart. She does all the work he assigns—an event hitherto unparalleled in the history of the University—and then, like Alexander, she sighs for more.

W. R. FRANTZ.

Justice can not be done this noble youth.

THOS. J. GILLOOLY.

The man with the map of Ireland on his face. He is somewhat of a foot-ball man, when he is mad. When you want to see Tom, go to Swisher's Theatre and take a front seat, he will be there, if the bill is a musical comedy.

BERTHA S. HAWLEY.

This young lady better known as "Tildy Ann" is the life of Woman's Hall, for she is very jolly. She is especially fond of midnight lunches (hauled up to the third story by a rope) and of walking up street with a tall man on each side of her. Miss Hawley, who is Assistant Editor-in-chief, is brilliant in Anglo-Saxon.

CLARK F. HINMAN.

Behold in this roguish-eyed lad, one of the versatile talents. Hinman once got up a vaudiville show; he was president of the Athletic Association last year; he plays on the foot-ball team, and last, but not least, he reports for a Morgantown Daily. His leisure time is spent in working for a B. S. M. E.

BROOKS S. HUTCHINSON.

Brooks is a product of Fairmont and a credit to his native town. He will be a man some day. This noble youth has the honor of being the lightest man on the Varsity foot-ball team last season. As President of the Athletic Association he is piloting the ship safely through the troubled seas.

J. H. JENKINS.

Jimmy's Ma told him to have nothing to do with the ladies when he came to W. V. U. He obeyed her until Prof. Emory entertained the engineers, then it was that Jim became known among the Co-Eds. Did you see him at the Junior Prom?

W. M. KENNEDY.

And now we must say something of 'Bill.' He is a charming youth, never deigning to look at anything so insignificant and frivolous as a Co-Ed. He has a wonderful mind. Why! when Bill was a mere infant, he could remember when it was time to cry.

ETHEL B. JONES.

This young lady has suddenly developed a mysterious fondness for Harvard. She has a Harvard pin, a Harvard pennant, greets you when you enter her door, and printed slips of Harvard examination questions flutter from the pages of her books. Can anyone explain, or—does it need explanation?

Monticola
'08.

H. W. LAWSON.

Lawson may not present a very imposing figure in the class-room, but as the fair co-ed said, "When Lawson dons his shoulder straps, and buckles on his sword, and begins to "bossy," there is, in slang phrase, "something doing."

GAY LOUGH.

This rosy-cheeked lad is the President of the Junior Class. It is rumored that Gay Lough found in his Christmas stocking a book on "Parliamentary Law." Why? Everyone knows that Lough is well-versed in that subject. He didn't need such a gift.

ARTHUR M. LUCAS.

Lucas is a slender fellow, with a little hint of the reserve force really in him. He is so fond of having his picture taken, that he insisted that the Monticola Board have four pictures taken so as to be sure to get a good one. We always have thought it was three for the Board and six for Lucas.

J. P. McJILTON.

McJilton, or "Mac" as he is more familiarly called is the star mechanical student of the Junior class. After the winter examination grades were sent out, "Mac" was overheard exclaiming in tones of heart-felt relief, "Well, I didn't make less than 73 or more than 75, Hurrah!"

GEORGE POW.

Behold our Editor-in-Chief. Like the suitor of 'fair Portia' who "bought his doublet from Italy, his round hose in France, and his bonnet in Germany," Pow is cosmopolitan. He was born in Scotland, brought up in Massachusetts, educated in Kentucky and he will be graduated (if the Faculty be sufficiently lenient) from the West Virginia University. The product is ——— well perhaps the less said about that the better.

HARBOUR MITCHELL.

Here is Mitch, the pride of all the men and the ladies' delight (?) How could it be other wise when he comes from Wheeling. He has athletic inclinations, unaf eed.

Monticola
'08.

BOYD RANDALL.

Foyd Randall is a tall good-looking, blue-eyed chap, who might make a hit with the co-eds, if he would only spare the time from his studies. Randall is a diligent student of Emerson, though, Emerson would probably turn over in his grave at some of the sentiments assigned to him by Randall.

CLARA REINHEIMER.

Miss Reinheimer's long suit is German. She has risen very nobly to the occasion often and helped her less fortunate sisters by translating German foot-ball notes in Beowulf. Miss Reinheimer lives in Fairmont, though really she is not to blame for that.

LEE ALLEN SMITH.

CILDA SMITH.

This tall young lady answers in Woman's Hall parlors to the name of "Judy." Her major is mathematics. In this field she has covered herself with glory and won the heart of "Foxy" Stewart. She bids fair now to be a politician, for she takes much interest in Rights (Reitz) of various matters.

LAWRENCE SAUNDERS.

This boy is never seen except going to and from his studies which he attends regularly. He spends his spare moments with the Kodak.

FLOYD B. SELBY.

Selby is a camera fiend. On almost any clear day, he may be seen industriously snapping the University buildings, the professors and the students. The small Junior pictures are evidences of his artistic (?) skill. Selby expects to be a B. S. M. E. some day, if the faculty is sufficiently lenient.

Monticola

JOHN F. THROCKMORTON.

John F. Throckmorton is one of our legal lights, who is bound to succeed if a long name has any weight. John's education is said to be deficient in one respect. He slams femininity. We would respectfully suggest that some of his friends in the Law Class attend to this deficiency at once.

C. E. TRACY.

This meek looking youth hails from the wilds of Monroe County. He was not heard of much around the Engineering school until he assumed the present role of running the 'Team.'

MARGARET L. WADDELL.

Miss Margaret Lynn Waddell showed what work she is capable of, by voluntarily enrolling in the fall term for Rhetoric I. This alone was noteworthy, but to cap the climax, she made 96 under "Pat!" Since then such is the reputation she gained that her work has been mere play.

MABEL JANE WEAVER.

Behold in this young-lady one of the kindest-hearted girls in the University. If you are blue, go to Miss Weaver for comfort. She will administer it by the wholesale. Miss Weaver is one of the Joke Editors of this Annual, which fact may account for the general excellence of the jokes.

GEORGE F. WHITING.

My motto is:

"A little learning is a dangerous thing
Drink deep, or taste not the Persian spring."

J. A. YONKER.

Allow us to introduce to you Jacob H. Yonker. "Jake," as he is best known, is so modest and retiring that even his professors are hardly aware of his existence, were it not for his brilliant class-work.

Monticola
'08.

ALLAN E. BURNER.

In the Fall of 1903, one, Allan E. Burner, came to W. V. U. from the wilds of Pocahontas County with two objects in view, one to secure a medical education and the other, to secure a wife. Since then he has made rapid strides in both directions. His education is about secured and for a wife he has had his eye on a dozen, but, the poor boy can not decide on the right one.

R. W. DUNHAM.

Bobby came to W. V. U. in 1902 with the one object in view of becoming a minister of the Gospel. But after interviewing Jack Hare he decided to study medicine. Though Bobby is only a little fellow he is there with the goods and always has a ready answer when quiz days come around. Bobby often refers to the many happy (?) hours spent in Prep Hall reciting Latin to Prof. Hare and always finishes with:—"Those days are the cause of my mighty stature."

C. W. CONN.

It would be a "Conn" game to write up this chap.

J. H. STEINBERGER.

On a beautiful summer morn, in the great valley of the Ohio, there was once born a bouncing baby boy. It was a hard matter for the parents to decide on a name for the new arrival, since they were extremely anxious to give him one that was not common and one he could be proud of when he became a man. After much deliberation, he was named Johnnie, and Johnnie it remained until he came to W. V. U. When the cute manner in which he mingled with the Co-eds, gave rise to the name he now bears, "Steeny the Heart-breaker." The first impression that John made at college was that of a flirt but now it has become more serious and we wonder what it can be that has caused such a change in the life and manner of our quiet little boy.

G. D. JOHNSON.

It was not 'till the year 1904 that W. V. U. was honored by the presence of young Delbert. His coming created quite a sensation, especially among the Co-eds. When asked what his object was in coming to school, he proudly expanded his chest and said, "I'm studying to be a Doctor." There are Doctors, and, there are Doctors, but, there is only one Delbert. There was a time when his modesty made him shy of all things female but that is of the past; now, his reputation with the girls is so well established that he is in a class by himself. But Delbert is a good fellow, and there may come a time when that longed for little 'M. D.' will be his.

Junior History

'08.

The coming of great events is often heralded beforehand by some mysterious splendor, the advent of striking phenomena is felt long before the actual arrival. So in the fall of 1904 was the coming of the class of 1908 felt days before the opening of the school. The sky seemed brighter, the campus took on a livelier green, and the instructors, the first time for years, appeared with smiles on their faces and hope in their hearts. There existed among them an assurance that the year would be a brilliant and successful one for W. V. U.

On the day of registration the old students were soon aware of powerful and superior spirits moving among them. Even the registrar did an unheard-of thing as a little bunch of '08ers came up who had already found in each other kindred spirits. As they handed him their cards he leaned back from his little table and slowly pushed back the white cap he wore. "Some more Freshmen, I see. Most promising class I've seen yet."

And at once this most remarkable class began to show "the stuff t'was made of." In the inter-class "rush" with the Sophomores of that year the '08ers won easily. The Sophomores realized early that they were in danger of defeat, so after sending up prayers and supplications to the gods for aid in the terrible struggle to come, they gathered around them the bravest representatives of Prepdom, (their closest allies), and met the class of 1908 on the campus. But as often as the Sophs. with frantic and desperate efforts rushed forward, the '08ers swept them back until they were forced to leave the field, victims of ignominious defeat.

Thus, when the wonderful class reached that stage of its collegiate development when it was called Sophomore, and when it met the class of 1909 in a similar bloodless combat, it came off the field bearing again the banner of victory.

In all forms of Athletics the members of the Junior class have won their share of laurels. In foot-ball, base-ball, and basket-ball they have distinguished themselves as well as on the track and elsewhere.

Among the members of the Junior class numbers those who in after years will be great statesmen, orators, engineers, and political and literary leaders of the country. As they have shown themselves in the past so will they show themselves in the future, ready and well prepared for any emergency that may arise.

The illustrious career of the Junior class with its noble achievements, its progress and development will serve as an inspiration for all succeeding classes. It is one of the cruelties of fate that not more than once in the history of a college does it boast of such a class as the class of 1908.

Sophomore History

'08.

If the class of 1909 were not so well known, a history of its work, and, perhaps, even its existence would be necessary. But as everyone, who is well informed, is aware of the merit and the talent of this class, this brief history is written for the enlightenment of the few, who may not for some reason or other, have as yet, heard of the achievements of this, the best class that ever entered the University.

In the fall of '05 we organized as a class and held our first class meeting and election amid the futile assaults of ever-present Sophomores. At this time, J. C. Gibson of Ohio County, was elected president.

Last fall found a majority of the class back, and after the usual class election, and the "Sophomore - Freshman Rush," the class settled down to work for the year. R. O. Hall of Taylor County, was elected president, and under his leadership, the class has met with unbounded success. Early in the year strong marks of superiority began to manifest themselves.

The value and importance of the class of '09 is everywhere perceived and admitted, and it may be said here, that no one places a higher estimate upon this class than its own members, each of whom works for the reputation and welfare of the school and the class. In fact, no one could be found who would willingly assume the responsibility of representing so brilliant a class.

In most, or all of the college organizations we have members of whom we are justly proud. Many honors have indeed come our way.

We have a basket ball team and a base ball team, both of which have never been beaten in any inter-class games. Besides this, we have representatives on the football eleven and the base-ball nine. Nor can it be said that our class is lacking in musical talent. Many of its members are found in both the Glee and Mandolin Clubs.

There are only a few of the positions filled by Sophomores, and a complete list would be almost impossible.

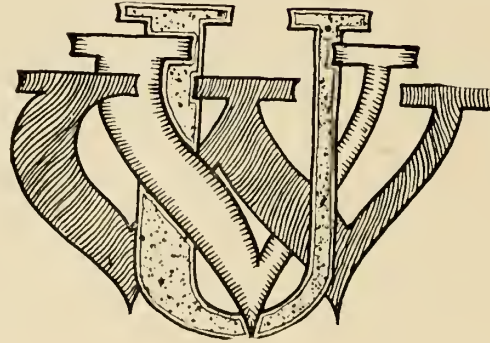

Our class is truly imbued with the college spirit. It always stands ready to help and to enlist others in the great work of education.

We challenge any class of W. V. U. to a comparison of the work done. In fact, we believe, that each member is a hard working student, who has high aims and ideas, and who is earnestly seeking to prepare himself for his chosen life work.

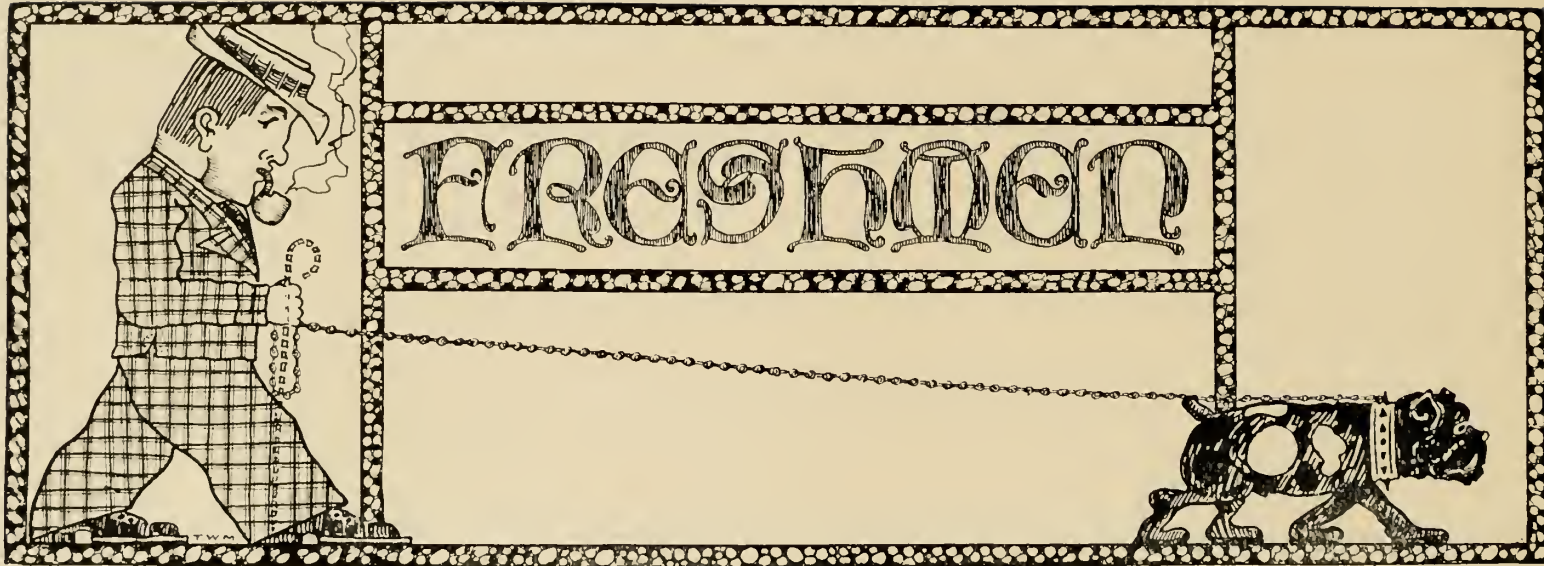

We are indeed proud of the work done in the past and hope in the future to maintain the reputation already earned.

Freshmen History

Monticola
'08.

In the fall of 1906 there came to the West Virginia University a class of mighty men. These men, when they looked upon themselves, said, "Woe unto those who are against us." When the Sophomores saw these Freshmen, they trembled and were filled with great terror. Well might they tremble, for at the hands of these men they were to suffer many and grievous defeats. Soon there appeared on the bulletin boards, notices concerning a Freshman class meeting on a certain evening at six-thirty. On that evening the earth shook with the weight of opposing armies. The Freshies came together on the campus, elected their leader, and prepared to meet the Sophs. Soon there were shouts from the direction of Commencement Hall, and the enemy appeared. Immediately the two sides lined up opposite each other and the bloody battle was on. Thrice did they meet in dreadful combat, and at the end the Freshies were announced the victors. Then with shouts they marched down to the theatre and witnessed scenes on the stage.

Soon after this victory for the Freshmen, the annual class field meet took place. Of course the Freshies were there. They entered their men in the several events, with the result that they carried off the honors of the day. The Sophs. were beaten again. With crestfallen looks they took their way homeward to tell how the Freshies had whipped them. They were sad, indeed, and wondered why such a glorious class as that of 1910 had ever entered school while they were Sophs. So others too have wondered, then shaken their heads and given up the problem, for none can understand how a whole class can be so invincible as is the Freshman.

Soon the next battle between the Freshies and Sophs. was to occur, and both sides prepared for the conflict. At last the fateful day came, and the classes met on the gridiron. The poor Sophs. fought hard to win but it was impossible. They were lined up against invincibles. When the Varsity coach witnessed the Freshmen's grand plays, he was filled with delight, and drew on the Freshmen resources for Varsity men. 'Twas the same old story. The Sophs. were badly worsted, and, down-hearted, they left the field with "curses not loud but deep."

Still another time were the Sophs. to meet their Waterloo at the hands of the Freshies. The foot-ball season being over, the Sophs. began to crow about how they would "wipe up the earth" at basket-ball. They thought they had a fine team, indeed, and their hearts were filled with dreams of revenge. They comforted themselves with the idea that now at last they would whip the Freshies. But alas! the best founded hopes may totter and fall, and so it was with the Sophomores. They met the Freshmen, and as usual were defeated. Then the air was filled with "weeping and wailing, and gnashing of teeth." The Sophs. then fully realized that t'was impossible to overcome the Freshies at any point whatever. The Freshmen have proved victorious in all forms of athletics, and the present Sophomore class will finish its course with vain regrets that it was ever destined to contend with such a class as that of 1910.

Not only are the Freshmen great on the athletic field, but also in the class room. They are recognized by the professors as being of a higher order of material than others. Thus there are no "flunks" in the class, and no need to address petitions or prayers for mercy to any auster council or committee.

In the time to come the Freshmen will keep up their record. There is surely a bright star which shall guide their future career.

Senior Law History

Gentlemen of the Jury:

We appeal to you, the world, sitting as a jury, to decide whether we, the Senior Law class of the West Virginia University, have done our duty as it was presented to us. We are going out into the world to do battles with mankind in the hope that success will be ours. Some will attain wealth, fame and glory, others will fall by the way-side unknown, unsung. If any one of our classmates does not attain the height for which he will struggle, he can look back to the days when he was a member of the greatest class ever turned out in the University, that of 1907, and there find comfort for his unsatisfied longings.

It was within the breast of this, our class, that the Honor system was born. It was this, our class, that nursed it into a toddling infant and then carefully trained it into a strong robust giant. Forever this will stand as a mark of distinction. Neither storms, the erosion of time nor warfare will destroy it, for it has been filled to overflowing with the elixir of life and bathed in the fountain of youth. Why do the other classes in the University disdain to pass this same system? The answer is simple, gentlemen, jealousy.

We have been accused of rowdyism and creating disturbances maliciously but the charges are unfounded. It is true we are noisy at times but only in the animal side of that great love which we bear to our University showing itself. It is that desire to conquer and do good breaking forth. This is the spirit which wins. Combine the desire to conquer with the good angel of love and they produce a fortification which is unassailable.

No matter what we be, statesmen, lawmakers or leaders, let us not forget the varsity days of the greatest class that the University has produced, the Law class of 1907.

Was it toothin

Junior Law History

Since it has been the custom of preceding classes to leave some slight traces of having passed through this vale of tears, it becomes my pleasant duty to state that we too have been, and are, diligent "Disciples of Blackstone." At the very outset, the Class of 1907-08 held one of the closest elections known to W. V. U., which resulted in the election of S. C. Littlepage as President. He has faithfully performed his many duties and shown himself a promising star of the W. Va. Bar. It is through his leadership and the hearty co-operation of the whole class that it stands today without a peer.

Though few in numbers we are well represented in every department of Athletics. "Three cheers for MacIntire and Gillooley" was a common cry on the foot-ball field last Fall. Rupert's name has been in the mouths of the fans all Spring and his work on the base-ball team has been a credit to the Class. Nor can it be said that we are weak mentally. Already the features of our orators, Dayton, Jackson, and Huff, may be seen in the leading newspapers. Since we expect their names to become known to the world it is unnecessary to speak of their part in the Inter-Collegiate debate when their opponents were driven before them like mist before a sea-born gale.

The sound morals and strong personality of our worthy Dean and his associates have deeply impressed each member of the Junior Law Class and never have they been known to make recitations in the Prep. department hideous by unearthy yells as they pass that much-needed department.

Each member of the class is a perfect gentleman and always meets his fellow class mates with a broad smile and at the same time reserves a much broader one for some heart-winning Co-Ed. Thus it may be justly said that in the hearts of a Junior Law are found two of the most desirable qualities of manhood, Love and Sympathy.

Freshmen Med History

'08.

In writing a history of this class, it must be borne in mind that space forbids us writing all that can be written on the subject. While not large in numbers, the class makes up in quality what it lacks in quantity. Some point out the fact that we are for the 'eagle eyes' of Drs. Grant, MacNeal, and Simpson, and should cause the rest of us to feel proud of being among the number that today make up the Freshmen Medics.

We are especially proud of our noble class officers who have always done their duty and who were never absent when needed. Henry Becker, our President, has been our representative in the Glee Club and his record speaks for itself. Tall and handsome, Henry has special favors at Woman's Hall. Our Vice-President is a "Byrd" Hunter and he usually gets the birds, though 'tis said that he once had to go to Fairmont to find one. Although our Secretary is 'Sis,' he has a weakness for young ladies. Anyone passing through Sunny Side about 11:30 P. M. on certain nights in the week, will hear the noise of a score of alarm clocks reminding Sisler that it is time to leave. 'Pigey' Point has had a very heavy burden upon his shoulders, but everyone believes that 'Pigey's' shoulders are broad enough to carry all the cash of the Freshmen Meds. Grimm, our very competent Yell Master is not at all grim although he probably felt that way when he was put off the train on a certain occasion.

In addition to the brilliant set of officers we have several men who distinguished themselves along the line of research work. Prominent among these is our handsome Glenn Harper who has spent many sleepless nights trying to find out how food went down the spinal chord. 'Pap' Taylor tried to demonstrate how to grow a mustache, and, he was kind enough to carry, in his vest pocket, a magnifying glass so we could all see. Doc. Sayre proved to the entire satisfaction of Dr. Simpson, the difference between a Malay and a Man. Every class has its digger and to C. L. Hutchinson belongs the honor of being ours. Sylvester had a bunch of 'Keys' but he lost it. His sadness for the past six months is thus explained. Campbell is our musician (he belongs to the band) and the sad wails of his mnsic (?) can be heard as far as the 'Hick' house.

We wish to express our gratitude to Drs. Simpson and Grant for their untiring efforts in our behalf. We are especially indebted to Dr. MacNeal who has labored for us in the face of difficulties that weaker men dare not face. The Freshmen Meds. are here for business and we trust that W. V. U. may never be ashamed to own us in the days to come.

A Parody

(Heard on the foot-ball trips.)

Tune: "Waltz Me Around Again, Willie."

Monticola
'08.

Here's to Coach Forkie who's sure on the porky,
Sam Hill can't you that plainly see?
A medal he's wearing, but not for his daring,
For bravery at a pink tea.
A fine bunch of ladies were drinking like Hades
And sure would have croaked on the spot,
Had not Coach with vigor jumped in in a jigger,
And manfully kicked o'er the pot.

CHORUS.

Chase me around again, Forkie,
Around, around, around.
I'm in such fine fettle I run like Prep Settle,
And don't let my feet touch the ground.
Like a Prohibish candidate running 'gainst booze
I'll run 'till I run the soles clean off my shoes;
Chase me around again, Forkie,
Around, around, around.

Who is it plays snappy and awfully scrappy,
And slugs his man woefully hard?
Who by his rough playing is all his foes slaying
'Cept when from the game he's debarred?
At Wup he went slugging, his man he got hugging,
And gave him a terrible jolt;
His man had Abe under, but to his great wonder
Abe soon had an Abe Overholt.

CHORUS.

Turn me around again, Abie,
Around, around, around.
You're such a hugger, a heck of a slugger,
You soon put my back to the ground.
But now on the side-lines we both soon will be,
And then on the game you will gaze wistfully.
Turn me around again, Abie,
Around, around, around.

There's a man they call Tubby, who plays awful scrubby,
As a hero you'll find he's right there.
One day he went swimmin' and saved nineteen women
Without even wetting his hair.
When Leahy was gasping, the water was grasping,
Brave Tubby who stood on the bank,
Said: "Men, I will save him, before you can shave him,"
Stooped down and the water soon drank.

CHORUS.

Save me from death again, Tubby,
Again, again, again.
He's built like a pretzel, the best in old Wetzel,
Just give three loud cheers for him, men.
No wonder he swims like a duck or a deer,
New Martinsville's water most half of the year.
Save me from death again, Tubby,
Again, again, again.

IN MEMORIAM.

“WEST VIRGINIA UNIVERSITY EXCAVATED”*

BY

WALTER DONALDSON HEREFORD.

*“WEST VIRGINIA UNIVERSITY EXCAVATED” is the title of the story that won first prize (Faculty judges) in the Monticola short story contest. It contained a few gentle roasts on various members of the faculty which were too pointed to suit the Censor and higher officials, and “West Virginia University Excavated” was laid away to rest.—The Editors.

Margaret's Part in the Contest.*

Benton, West Virginia, April 5, 1907.

My Dear old Eleanor:

I am almost ashamed to write to you after having waited so long, but I have been so very busy that I have not had the time to write sooner. You know I am expecting to graduate this year, and, of course, I have more than usual to do, as I have to write my graduating essay. There are eleven in the Senior class. There were only ten of us last year, but Nettie Marsh came into our class at the beginning of this term. Did I ever tell you about her? She has lived out in the country all her life, and I do not think she has been accustomed to very much. All of our class were surprised when Professor Burke said she could graduate this year. It seems, though, that she has had a good teacher at the country school, who prepared Nettie for college. That "marvelous Miss White" as Nettie calls her teacher, got married some time ago, and the result is that Nettie has come to Benton, and is in our class. All of us Seniors are cross to think that she will graduate with us. You see we have been together ever since our Freshman year, and now we do not like a stranger to come into the class at the eleventh hour.

Nettie is certainly an odd-looking girl. She wears calico shirt-waists all out of style, a shabby brown skirt that sags in the back, and a brown hat with two chicken feathers on it. She acts just as strangely as she dresses. Sometimes we girls talk to her, and she never answers anything except, "yes" or "no." During the recess period, she never takes a walk,—always sits at her desk and studies.

Indeed, she hasn't any more life in her than a rag doll has. Let me tell you what a silly thing she did one day; I had brought some fudge to school one day and was passing it around to all of the girls and boys. After I had given all of the rest, I handed some to Nettie, who was sitting in a far corner of the room. When I passed the candy to her, great tears came into her washy blue eyes. Now anyone who cries when a girl offers her some fudge is perfectly silly. Don't you think so?

Dear me, here I have been so busy telling you about Nettie Marsh, that I had almost forgotten to say anything about the prize which Mr. Gray has offered. He has offered ten dollars to the Senior who writes the best paper. After thinking a great deal harder than I generally think, I have decided to try for the prize. Ten dollars isn't so much, and yet it would get me a great many things I want. Of course, Nettie Marsh is going to try, too. I certainly hope that she will not get it. If I am not the lucky one, I want one of the girls or boys, whom I know real well to get the prize. I have decided to write about "A School Girl's Life." Do tell me something to say, some little suggestions, you know. I am all in a flurry over this prize. My mind seems to be a blank; at first, I thought it wouldn't be hard to write a paper, but, don't you know, every thing I say sounds so tame!

Indeed, my dear old Eleanor, I must stop writing because I have a thousand and one things to do. I hope that you will not be too busy to write to me very soon.

From your loving cousin,

MARGARET.

My Dearest Eleanor:

Monticola

This is the first opportunity I have had to answer your very interesting letter. I can testify that a girl is very busy when she is about to graduate and has to write a prize paper besides. It was perfectly lovely of you to make those suggestions. I don't know what I should have done without them.

Now, my dear old cousin, I am going to tell you something which I am certain you will be glad to hear. One day last week, I was reading my paper to Professor Burke, and he told me, very confidentially, of course, that my paper was the best of all that he had heard. You see, all of us have read our papers to the professor and he made some suggestions and corrections. Now, don't you breathe it, but he told me that he saw no reason why I should not win the prize. You may think strange for the teacher to tell me this, but you see, he is not one of the judges, so it doesn't matter much what he told me. Professor Burke also said Nettie Marsh had a very interesting paper. Do you suppose there is any possibility of her winning? I am not much afraid of such a thing after what Professor Burke has said about my paper, but just suppose that the judges should like Nettie's paper better! But I am going to do my best to win.

I do not know whether I shall have time to write to you again before the contest or not. However, I shall write as soon as it is over.

Lovingly your cousin,

MARGARET.

P. S.—I am having a beautiful white organdy made for the contest. It is trimmed with lace and is very pretty.

M.

Benton, West Virginia, May 25, 1907.

My dear Eleanor:

No doubt you have been wondering whether I won the prize contest, which was held last night. I imagine you shut your eyes and tried to see me how I looked in my new dress as I read my paper. Honey-Bunch, I know you will be surprised when I tell you that I was not at the contest. I shall tell you how it all happened. About a week ago, I was sitting all alone in our recitation room at the noon hour. I did not know that anyone was near until I heard Nettie Marsh's voice. She was out in the hall, and as the door was open, I could hear every word that she said. She was talking to one of the Junior girls. I heard her say, "Yes, I should like to get the prize, but I suppose I can't. I should like to have the money to give to mother. She is working so hard to keep me in school. Father is dead, you know."

Eleanor, I cannot describe the feeling that went over me when I heard these words. All in a flash I saw how selfish I was and how unselfish Nettie was. Then it entered my head to let Nettie get the prize. At first, I must confess, it was very hard for me to give up the idea of the honor, but every time I was tempted to be selfish, Nettie's words would ring through my head. I made all sorts of plans to keep from being in the contest. At last, I decided that I would have an attack of the grippe, so last Tuesday I suddenly became very ill! I told Mamma that I had a raging headache, and sharp pains between my shoulders. Of course, poor dear little mamma was very much alarmed, as it was just two days before the contest, and she wanted to send for the doctor. I assured her that I did not need a physician as I would soon be well. Mamma made me go to bed, so I was compelled to be in a scorching hot room all day Wednesday and yesterday. The blinds were down and not a breath of air could get into the room. The blinds were put down at my suggestion, as I told Mamma that the light hurt my eyes. To tell the truth, I didn't want Mamma to see what a healthy-looking sick person I was.

During these last two days, I have suffered like a martyr. I have drunk no less than two gallon dandelion tea, and have had my back blistered with at least half a dozen mustard plasters as large as an apple pie. Every time mamma came into the room, I groaned as if I were in great misery.

Yesterday, I shed a few large crocodile tears, when I told mamma it would be impossible for me to take a part in the contest, as I was not very much better. She wrote a note to Professor Burke, telling him of my illness. When evening came, I was much better—that is, well enough for mamma to go to the contest. All the time she was away, I was nervous and excited. I was so anxious to know who would win the prize that I could scarcely wait for her return. After hours and hours, it seemed to me, she came home. "Who won?" I almost screamed. "Let me see," said mamma, "some girl by the name of Marsh, I believe."

I was so glad that I jumped out of bed and danced around the room with joy. "Margaret," said mamma, much alarmed, "You are sick! Go back to bed this minute." Then I confessed my sin to mamma, and strange to say, she did scold me for my deceitfulness, but only said, "you poor child!" I am not certain whether she was thinking of my sacrifice or the dandelion tea and mustard plasters.

Don't you think I have written you a long letter for a sick person? You must write a letter equally as long to your cousin,

MARGARET.

The Mission of Woman.

Since Adam quit tending the Eden truck farm
It's troubled both cynic and sneer
To discover for woman a mission on earth
Besides that of being a dear;
The poet, the lover, the woman's rights crank
All assign her a positive place,
But it's taken the maker of posters and ads
To make use of her form and her face.

Her molars she's scouring with "Brown's Scrub Them Clean"
As a peach she's an ad. for "Peach Soap,"
Be it autos or crackers or candies or gum
Her mug's along side of the dope;
With "Leblache's" or "Mennen's Borated"
She powders herself just for us,
With health foods and flours, cigarettes and pure beers
She shows she's a terrible cuss.

On magazine covers and calendars too
She smiles on us day after day,
The right to display our suspenders and socks
She will probably soon take away;
For her face and her figure are used as an ad.
From Greenland to Fiji's dark isles,
Though she no longer works as a keeper of homes
As an ad. she works hard with her smiles.

You'll find her so pictured and posed everywhere
That you cannot escape here below
And when you are dead you are likely to find
In the next world it still will be so;
So don't be surprised if St. Pete passes out
A harp ad. that's graced with her soul,
And the devil will probably sell patent scoops
With an ad. for her shoveling coal.

The Heart of the Geisha.*

'08.

To walk into a Japanese tea-house in Tokio, and see a Greek letter fraternity pin on the kimono of a dark-eyed geisha is such a surprise, that you may be pardoned if your curiosity should lead you to ask how the pin got there. Picture, if you please, sunny April in Japan. It is the choicest month in the year. The air is fragrant with perfume. There are cherry blossoms, pink and white everywhere. You seem to have been transported into Floral-land, a land where life is pleasure.

In such a land, one bright April morning, John Howard, Yale '04, found himself. He was a young American civil engineer, who had been sent by his government on a special mission to Japan. Howard was tall and broad-shouldered, a typical college-bred fellow. His face in repose, was rather commonplace; when animated, it was rather striking. When he smiled, which he did often, he disclosed a set of even white teeth. His eyes, dark and twinkling, were his most distinguishing feature. You thought that they were dark brown; but, when you looked at them closely, you found that they were dark blue. You never quite got over the surprise.

Howard's first week in Japan was a lonely one. He was a man of strong affections, and he missed sorely, not only his family, but the boys—and Nellie. Nellie, you must understand, was the girl he had left behind him in Maryland, the girl, who even then was waiting for "Jack" to come back. At the beginning of the second week, John, wandering by chance into a Japanese tea-house, was greeted by a bewildering vision femininity.

A dainty Japanese geisha was asking what his excellency would have. She was barely five feet in height, but she was so exquisitely proportioned that she seemed taller. Her shining black hair was piled in coils on her head. Through the top coil two jewelled hairpins were stuck at a coquettish angle. Her expressive eyes were dark and so were her eyebrows. Her eye-lashes were long and curly. Her mouth was small and of curves best described by the word "kissable." Her kimono of red crepe silk was just short enough to reveal a pair of red kid sandals. Altogether the vision was a charming one.

She was the first woman that had spoken to John since he had been in Japan. He stared so long and so hard that blushing she repeated the question.

"What will your excellency have?"

"Oh!" said John hastily, "Bring me a cup of tea and some wafers."

When she returned with the tea, John ventured a remark. Her command of English was very poor so that conversation languished. When John left, she said, "Come again." That, and the first sentence she had uttered, seemed to be the only ones, which, doubtless for material reasons, she knew best.

John did "come again," at the end of the week. And then the time between his visits shortened until he got into the habit of dropping in every day about five for his cup of tea. Onoto, (for by this time he had learned her name,) was always looking for him, and she was the little geisha who always served him. Their conversations grew longer and longer. She gave him many an insight into the life of Japanese geisha. John told her all about his college and his work, teaching her many new words incidentally. His fraternity pin interested her most. She had told him once that the men of her land never wore jewelry. John, in a general way, had tried to explain why he wore the scroll of Alpha Delta Chi. You can readily understand why he did not succeed very well. All that Onoto gathered was that he loved it very much.

One day, John came into the tea-house rather hurriedly. As Onoto served him, he said excitedly,

“Onoto, I am going away tonight.”

She looked at him blankly. “Going away?”

“Yes, I am going back to America, to the dearest land on earth,” he said jubilantly. He did not notice how white she had grown.

Yet, in his own way, he was fond of her. “Onoto, there is a girl back in America waiting for me. When I tell her how good you have been to me, she will not begrudge to you the dearest thing I own—my fraternity pin.”

Silently she let him pin it on her red kimono. Then she lifted her face to his and her eyes were dark with unshed tears. Against the whiteness of her face, they shone strangely. “I shall wear it for ever,” she said, as though registering a vow. Then in American fashion they shook hands and said, “Goodbye.”

That night, on board an American liner, John Howard thought uneasily. “Onoto seemed pretty much cut up. I believe she half-liked me.”

That night, on her bed of matting, a humble Japanese geisha prayed to her gods for strength for the future.

At the Prom.

Ouch! Oh!
What! On your toe?
Say that music's fine,
Almost divine.
Ouch! Oh!
Again on your toe?
Hope you will excuse me,
Just learning you know,
Do I like Poe?
Yes, I think he's all right.
That music's divine,
Say you dance out of sight.
I think this makes nine,
Why, I could two-step all night.

Bliss and Misery.

If perfect bliss
Is to kiss
The lips of a co-ed,
I pray thee
To tell me
The greatest misery.
My prayer is this
About the kiss
And perfect bliss
“That when I taste
The sand and paste
May the good Lord
Have me dead.”

On Such a Morn.

Jessie and Lorenzo had worked hard from eight-thirty until twelve o'clock on one of those terrible winter term examinations. Somewhat discouraged, they talked as follows as they strolled around the circle:

Lor.——.

“On such a morn as this
When the sweat flowed swiftly to the knees
And they did quake together, on such a morn
Sisyphus, methinks mounted the rugged hill
And let slip the huge round stone
That cost him many a sigh and many a groan.”

Jess——

“On such a morn
Did many a Christian trip to the den
And there fight and die with the beasts
Or mangled, limp away.”

Lor.——.

“On such a morn
Was Prometheus bound to the cruel rock
That vultures might be filled with liver
And jealous Gods be pleased at the sight of pain.”

Jess——

“On such a morn
Some imp invented irregular verbs
And did in this outdo old Satan.”

Lor.——.

“On such a morn
Did Jessica steal answers from her neighbor
And with swift pen told all from Adam
As far as Green Persimmon.”

Jess——

“On such a morn
Did young Lorenzo wear well his spur
Bleeding the sides of his gentle horse
To him a true one.”

Lor.——.

“On such a morn
Will Gabriel blow his mighty horn
And call men unprepared to judgment.
Then none may horse or pony ride
St. Peter grades us right, you know
If ninety, “above;” if sixty, “below.”

My Mating Match.

After an absence of two years I found myself at the Commencement Ball of The West Virginia University. As soon as the hearty welcome of my old friends was past, I withdrew to my favorite nook from which place I could see the happy faces flit before me, and listen to the merry feet and the sweet "Hudson Waltz" of the same old orchestra to which music I had oft danced. Now and then there floated to my ears above the soft cadence of music, the suppressed merry outbursts of laughter.

It was a case of heart that drew me back to these beloved scenes. Dreamily my thoughts turned from the moments of the present to a picture of the past; a picture whose every incident was graven upon my heart for I had been both hero and martyr. Before me stood the trim figure of a girl with laughing, mischievous eyes of brown and red, smiling lips. She it was whom I loved and had loved these six years past with all the fiery passion of youth. How happy I had been this night two years ago! Had I not just hope that she loved me with the same pure passion I held for her? But it was at the gate—at the gate—Alas!

She had but played with me, toyed with me, lied to me all the time. Yet I loved her. And because I loved her, I had returned to get one glimpse of her before I left to return I knew not when. In vain my eyes searched the ball room of the Armory; she was not here. My heart was too heavy for dancing this night; I felt a defeated competitor after the award had been made.

Wearily I got my hat and moved through the conservatory. I no longer heard the sweet music, the laughter, or merry trip of feet, for my mind had conjured up the treasured picture of a past day, the sole remaining companion of my jilted heart. As I turned the knob of the door which led out into the night, I heard my name spoken by a voice whose familiarity made my heart bound and rebound, every muscle quiver, and every nerve tingle. Pain intermingled with happiness swelled up into my heart like a tidal-wave upon the beach. Trembling, I turned leaving the door half open.

"Mignon!" burst from my lips.

It was the same sweet girl who had spoken those fateful words at the gate. With her large brown eyes sparkling with pleasure and a smile diffusing her whole countenance, she quickly came towards me. As I looked at her I knew why I loved her so dearly—this beautiful vixen.

"Why, Dick Langmead, where on earth did you come from?" she asked as she took my hand.

"I got in this afternoon from Mexico," I replied, and my hand trembled in hers.

"From Mexico? What have you been doing in Mexico? Come, Dick, sit down and tell me all that you have been doing since you graduated."

I tell her of what I had been doing? I sit beside her, look into her eyes, hear the sound of her voice, feel my heart, yes, my very soul sick with melancholy? No, this was more than I sought. A man has the courage to face all difficulties, save to be in the presence of her whom he loves, but who has refused him. I could not relate how empty life had been since that Commencement Ball; how utterly desolate and uncheerful home had been, how I had gone to the Mexican Rockies to be far from all familiar faces only to think—think—of the Mignon I loved. I had lived with nature, conversed with her, and tried to forget. I could not. No, no, I could not tell her of this. I could not stay.

“Mignon,” I said, “do not think me ungallant, but it is necessary that I go, I have a very important engagement at ten-thirty, so important that I cannot neglect it. It is ten now. I know that you will excuse me for this evening, won't you?”

“Why, Dick Langmead, what do you mean? Of course you would be ungallant. Do you think that I am going to let you go so soon? No, indeed. Let the old engagement go. Let it go, do you hear? Come, Dickie, that's a good boy.”

She laid her hand lightly on my arm, and looked up at me in the most wistful, beseeching manner with her large brown eyes. As I looked into them, I felt myself drawn to her. Be the result what it might I would stay. I walked with her to a cupid-seat, concealed as it was by beautiful palms and ferns. As we seated ourselves the lovely notes of “Peter Piper” floated in, and my spirits nearly rose to the point of happiness.

“Now, Dick, that I have broken that obstinate will of yours, I want you to tell me of what you have been doing.”

There was no escape, I must relate all. I took control of my voice lest she might hear the sadness of my heart.

“Well, Mignon,” I began with voice slightly quivering, “after that night—that night of the Ball I went home. For some reason I did not find the wanted happiness there; the familiar faces did not interest me. I was tired of balls, of society, of Salon prattle; I longed to go out into the world, not among business men, but where I could be free from all restraint, to live with nature.”

“Father had just purchased a large ranch north-west of Monterey, and I prevailed upon him to give me the superintendency. Arriving at El Buenoviento, the ranch's name, I found things in a most deplorable condition. The cow-punchers were a motely crowd of drunkards and thieves. I discharged them all and secured a force of Texans. Those whom I had discharged took illwill against me, and began to steal my cattle as well as shoot the Texans. We had a big fight in October on the Yalo, which we won. But that seemed to arouse their hatred all the more. With a force increased by half, they attacked us one evening before mess with the intent of burning the buildings. We ran out of the cabins to give fight, and as I stepped through the door, I fell, shot through the right lung.”

“Yes, I was laid up several weeks. Well, my boys got behind the cabins and nearly annihilated the villainous gang. After that they never troubled me again.”

“Faithfully I worked upon the ranch, never shirking my slightest duty, but strive as I might I could not be happy. The boys were kind enough to me; they did all they could to make me happy, but to no avail. I love nature; I love to feel the cool, fresh air of the prairie, to see the beautiful sunrise and miles of green grass, and hear the lowing of the cattle. But all of this could not draw the melancholy from my heart. Something was lacking in my life.”

“Dick, it was only the presence of a woman that was lacking. Are there not plenty of Spanish señoritas there? I have heard that they were beautiful, more so than the American girl; they love strangers, besides they are usually well educated.”

I looked at Mignon and found her searching my face with her eyes as if trying to read my every expression. She seemed to be eagerly waiting my answer. I could not understand her interest.

“Yes, Mignon, the señoritas are all of that, but I had no desire to marry any. I never made the acquaintance of one. In fact I did not care to meet any woman. My heart was too lonely and depressed to seek consolation. I felt as if I could stand it no longer, and in despair I decided to leave. I made an honest old cowboy captain and wired father of my departure.”

“And, Dick,” broke in Mignon, “where are you going now?”

“I am going to leave America. I am going to live in fast society to see if I cannot drown this melancholy: to forget these cares and pains. No matter at what price happiness comes it shall be bought. Count de Barnois of Paris has invited me to live with him, and I leave tomorrow to accept his invitation. That is my story, Mignon. Now I must go.”

“No, Dick, you must not go to Paris. You must not try to find happiness in the bowl and among society women. Go back to Buenoviento and work for your father.”

“I can’t go back there, I would go mad. To live so lonely, so isolated, is hell itself. I know that I ought to go, but I cannot stand it.”

“Take some one back with you, Dick, some girl. Is there not one girl that could make your life happy?”

“No—No,” I falteringly lied. I longed to tell her all; to tell her that I could live anywhere or under any conditions with her. Yet I feared to speak.

“Study hard, Dick. Is there not just one girl who could make you happy far away from society, from humanity?”

Once more she searched the depths of my mind with her eyes. To look into them and lie was impossible.

“Yes, Mignon,” I replied in a low, tremulous voice, “there is one girl, but she—she—”

“Refused you, Dick? But, Dick, remember the old saying that girls do not always mean what they say. Ask her again.”

“I cannot. It is not because I do not love her, for God knows that I love her to madness. I could not stand a second refusal. No, I am going to Paris. No more nature for me,” I concluded recklessly.

“No, you are not going to Paris. You are going back to Mexico. You are going to look after your father’s interests as well as your own. Besides, Dick, you are going to be happy, for you are going to take back the girl you love.”

“Mignon! Mignon!” I cried, “for heaven’s sake don’t trifle with me.”

“Why, Dick, I am not trifling with you,” and she looked smilingly up into my face.

“You don’t mean—don’t mean,” I arose quivering with emotion.

“I mean, Dick Langmead, that I am going with you to Mexico. Why, Dick, I have proposed to you. Couldn’t you see, you stupid, that I loved you that night two years ago? I have loved you all the time, and I was so afraid that you would never return. My girlish vanity nearly ruined us both. But, Dickie, that is all past, and I love you a whole lot more now.”

Slowly as if in a dream I drew her to my heart, and as I kissed her upturned lips the sad plaintive tones of the “Waltz of Dreams” wafted to my ears, but it found no audience. The ears of my heart were closed to sadness for I had found my mating match.

ORGANIZATION.

The University consists of the following colleges, schools, and departments:—

- 1 The College of Loafers.
- 2 The College of Working Mechanics (Union Men).
- 3 The College of Farmacology.
- 4 The College of Lawlessness.
- 5 The College of Hick-kutters.
- 6 The College of Hoss Doctors.
- 7 The College of Hot Air.
- 8 The College of Discords.
- 9 The School of Foreshorting.
- 10 The School of Sabbeth School Oratory.
- 11 The Department of Flunkers.

LOCATION.

The University is found on various parts of the campus, extending from the river to the other side of the campus. The location is the same as last year except that the Athletic field has been raised and an expensive sistem of tiling (?) laid to assist in making it water-proof.

FUNDS.

The University is supported by (1) Interest on its debts. (2) The liberality (???) of the State Legislature. (3) Extortions from the students. (4) Gym. Fees.

BUILDINGS.

The buildings are as follows:—

- 1 Woodburn Hall, brick, for the confinement of the Law School and the School of Music. Often used as a place to test Chinese fire crackers.

- 2 Science Hall, brick, day loafing place for "Prexie."
- 3 Martin Hall, brick, kindergarten department.
- 4 Commencement Hall, brick, square, formerly used as a brewery, now a place not to have Chapel.
- 5 Experiment Station, red, for the analysis of fertilizers.
- 6 The Armory, brick, basement, for Y. M. & Y. W. C. A. receptions, and dances.
- 7 Library, stone, for loafing, spooning, manufacture of matches, etc. This building contains a number of choice alcoves, secluded spots and window seats for a selected number of young people, (you are expected to furnish your own cushions and accessories).
- 8 Prexie's House, stone, for ornamental purposes.
- 9 The Central Heating and Power Plant?????, for use when the supply of coal and gas is exhausted.
- 10 The Woman's Hall, wood, barn-like, for a bluff.
- 11 Observatory, for class use in Sign Painting and Advertising.
- 12 Athletic Field, for experimental purposes and Cadet drill. This field can be used for athletics between times.

ENTRANCE REQUIREMENTS.

The subject may be either a male or female. In either case he or she is expected to bring a certificate from some school or institution saying that the bearer has had twice the amount of work for which credit is desired (all desired credits will be discounted 50 per cent.)

REGISTRATION.

Under the new and expeditious system of registration a new student can register in a week, if he has an old one to pilot him through the red-tape district. Old students, by taking the short cuts, may get through in less time. Students should form in line around the circle before passing before the "White Cap."

CLASSIFICATION.

Students will be classed according to their flunks, cuts, and ability to chew "Mail Pouch."

No student shall be admitted to the Freshmen class until he has provided himself with a milk bottle, a bib and a paint brush.

No student shall be classified as a Sophomore until he has been three years a Freshman in good and regular standing. (By diligent cutting and flunking a satisfactory examination, and with the consent of the committee on flunking and grading this condition may be removed).

No student shall be classified as a Junior until he has been at least three times on the "Faculty Mule."

No student shall be classified as a Senior until he can thoroughly masticate and expectorate four bags of "Mail Pouch" a day.

DEGREES.

This institution offers the following degrees which will be conferred upon the worthy students at the end of four or more years at the discretion of the committee on Students' Exits.

Bachelor of Athletics(A. B.)
Bachelor of Loafing(Ll. B.)
Mule Driver (M. D.)
Kitchen Mechanic (K. M.)
Doctor of Phlunking (Ph. D.)

EXAMINATIONS.

Examinations will be held at the close of each term to determine the official standing of the students. Post mortem examinations will be held at the beginning of the term for the benefit of those whose standing is still in doubt. A student is expected to make at least 60 per cent. (average) to still sojourn with us but if he shows the proper spirit of humiliation and promises to reform he will be given another opportunity (this process will be repeated ad infinitum.)

GENERAL INFORMATION.

Special inducements are offered students taking Sab-beth School Oratory, no tuition will be charged and a reduction will be obtained in board.

Chapel will be given if enough students apply for the course to justify its being given.

Rooms may be had at private houses. Students must, however, furnish their own tobacco, periodicals, and refreshments.

When wishing to smoke on the campus one should place himself on the steps of some building where he may be seen and at the same time block the progress of other students. It is also good form to lean out of the windows for a short smoke, usually a cigarette.

"Mail Pouch" is the only brand of chewing tobacco officially recognized by the Chewers' Union.

Light boarding can be had at any of the fortresses of the city.

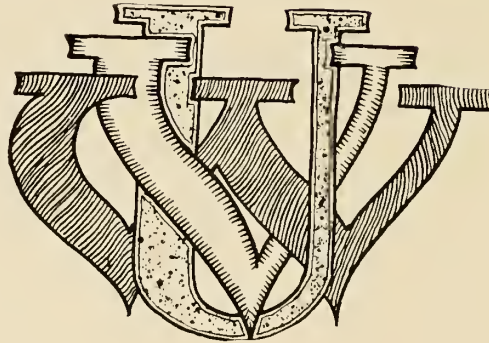

Students wishing to make use of the Athletic Field must secure a suitable boat and have it inspected and registered by the Superintendent of Marines.

Monticola
'08.

To secure uniformity of conditions for all kinds of Athletic contests, a rain has been ordered for each event scheduled.

All students should set their watches with the chronometer on Martin Hall and keep them regulated with it (corrected annually by wireless telegraphy from the basement).

Further information concerning any of the schools or departments may be had by writing to the Head of the same or the Secretary of the "Lemon Club."

“Girls what’s all that commotion up stairs?” “O, that’s Cilda Smith, putting things to Reitz.”

Mrs. Howe, “Sh! It’s Sunday.”

An extra postman has been put on the Woman’s Hall route since January 3rd, because Blake Lemley alone, has received 98 letters, 70 post cards, 6 packages, and 4 special deliveries.

Emma Harris, at the telephone, “Please go ‘way and keep quiet, it’s a long distance message.”

“Tildy” is stopped in the hall, having been discovered as she crossed the bridge—“It doesn’t look well, Bertha, for you to walk with two large gentlemen.” “Tildy,” meekly, “I’m sorry they’re so big.”

In her zeal for knowledge Helen Vance arises at 2:30 A. M., and disturbs the slumbers of her long-suffering roommate, with her frantic efforts at translating Horace.

Miss Moore in the dining room, at the beginning of the term, “Young ladies, you will take your places as follows: Miss Stout will sit next to me—why she is ‘nt here!” One of the girls, “I just met her hurrying to the depot.”

“Don’t be alarmed, it’s only little Trixie sliding brooms down the stairs.”

Since Miss Gertrude Pollock’s ascent to the third floor, Miss Moore has to make frequent trips up there, to stop the nightly revelry.

The damsel from Erie, holding a burning match in her hand—very excitedly—“Girls, name it Quick!”

“THE MODERN CUPID.” A book for co-eds especially, telling when and where to look for him, when you should find him, and how to know him when you do find him. A very exhaustive treatise on the subject and rhetorically correct, by Miss Evalyn Burns.

“A BACHELOR’S BLUNDER.” In this book, Mr. O. C. Lewis sets forth the reasons why he has never married. The book is somewhat of an autobiography of his own life. Mr. Lewis tells the young men to avoid following in his footsteps. It seems to be his bigness of heart that induced him to write such a book. The book is very interesting and instructive to young men.

“THE HIGHER AND BETTER LIFE OF LONG HAIR IN ITS RELATION TO CHRISTIANITY.” A great literary triumph; in its style and in the thought expressed it stands alone. By D. W. Baushke, with Preface, Appendix and Index by Ichabod Crane.

Our Censor.

Friends, students, West Virginians! lend me your ears.
I come to laud our Censor and to praise him.
The evil themes we write are scored by Simeon,
The good are sometimes praised by dear old "Pat."
So was it with our Censor. Our Editor
Will tell you that our Censor was censorious,
And grievously hath the Censor censured us.
Here under leave of Prexie—AND the Censor,
(For Prexie is a lenient, gentle censor,
So are the Profs—all lenient, gentle censors),
Come I to write for our Monticola,
The Censor was our friend, our "firm, good friend,"
But Pow, our Editor, says he was censorious,
And Pow, our Editor, surely ought to know.
Our Censor "canned" a roaring, ripping story
Of local color, "West Virginia Excavated."
Did this in our friend, the Censor, seem censorious ?
And when Pow kicked, our Censor then relented.
All Censors should be made of sterner stuff.
But Pow still says the Censor was censorious
And Pow, our Editor, surely ought to know.
You all should know, that the "Profs." who are in the story
When separately seen, were most indifferent,
Together, they stood pat. And so the Censor
Canned the story. Was this censorious ?
Yet Pow still says, he was censorious
And Pow, our Editor, surely ought to know.
We editors read the story, not without laughter
Why then should our Censor deny it to you?
O judgment———! ! ! Bear with us.
The story never was "O. K-ed by Censor."

A Tragedy (If Miss Moore learns of the borrowing).

In Four Acts.

Act I.

Time. Sunday, 6 P. M.

Scene. Woman's Hall Parlor.

The telephone bell rings violently. Every girl jumps up with a look of expectation, then, quickly sits down again and endeavors to look indifferent. After much (?) persuasion, Cilda is induced to answer the phone. The message proves to be for Miss Harris.

Act II.

Time. Five minutes later.

Scene. Same.

Miss Harris re-appears in the parlor, "It's Mr. H—— and he wants me to go to church. Gussie, may I wear your black hat?"

Act III.

Time. Ten minutes later.

Scene. Miss Lowe's room.

Emma tries on Gussie's hat, and finding it becoming to her, departs to dress.

Act IV.

Time. Seven-thirty.

Scene. Presbyterian Church.

Miss Harris and Mr. H—— walk into church. Sharp-signed woman: "I think I saw that tall Miss Lowe wearing that hat yesterday. I wonder whose it really is."

Curtain.

N. B.—These scenes may be repeated indefinitely, proper substitutions of names, places and garments being made.

Brain Storms.

Minor Squalls.

STRIKE ONE.

The strife 'round the umpire waxed and grew,
Nor yet did the row diminish;
And they beat him to pulp with a base-ball bat,
And gave him a hard wood finish.

PROF. EMORY.

Some say the man is crazy—
To me he so appeals—
Now if he's really crazy,
He must have Emery wheels.

NOT ANGULAR.

The maiden to her lover coos,
As towards his arms she swerves;
"You'd better hold on tight, Sweetheart,
When you go 'round the curves."

PROFESSOR PATTERSON.

In Rhetoric 2 when questions are dealt,
There isn't a question but that,
The hand that one gets must always be played
You're fixed, so you have to stand "Pat."

"TOMMY" HODGES.

I like Professor Hodges' talks,
His jokes I like a lot,
But sometimes what he says, I think
Is awful Tommyrot.

THE ROAD TO HEALTH.

The road to health 'tis hard to find,
But that there's one there's no dispute;
For many know the only way
Is just to take the good Swamp Route.

TOO MUCH FOR THE MAJOR.

Major Burns is a soldier brave,
And his duty he'll do almost;
The Dominion and Chronicle he faithfully reads,
But he falls asleep at his Post.

SIMEON SMITH.

This teacher is a funny man,
His every speech has wit and pith
Why should he not cut monkey-shines?
His name is Simeon Smith.

I BET HE LAUGHED IF HE DID.

When the Lord in creation was fixing with care
Geological periods down,
I wonder if he ever planned for the race,
The limit in one Sammy Brown.

As Others See Us

Dr. Purinton, (taking off his eye-glasses and smiling benignly), "Now, if you'll pardon something personal——"

Monticola

Dr. Reynolds, (chewing his thumb), "Now that's so— isn't it?"

Dr. Deahl, (with a hand on each hip), "Well I don't know that I just catch the drift of your meaning. Please state your question again."

Dr. Callahan, (ramming both hands viciously into his coat-pockets), "Now, I'll ask you this question. Now I'll ask you another question."

Professor Cox, (in a stern voice), "This is abominable. Vague paraphrases are not acceptable. Inexact knowledge is worth nothing."

Dr. Whitehill, (coughing), "Well, it's in the book— That's what we're here for—I can't study your lessons for you."

Professor Stewart, (in a consiliatory tone), "Now boys, now, young gentlemen."

Dr. Truscott, (icily), "It would be well to consult the dictionary occasionally, and not to rely wholly on one's own memory."

Professor Emory, (with an authoritative air), "Whenever in doubt, take moments."

Professor Armstrong, (with a twinkle in his eye), "The class hereafter will please sit alphabetically."

Professor Morris, (in a determined tone of voice), "I want to learn you something before the end of the term."

Professor Hodges, (waving both arms violently), "Now you may think it strange for 220 pounds of beef and brawn like me to talk about spirit, but I tell you foot-ball spirit——"

Professor Patterson, (in a weary tone), "Be natural— Have one point of view and stick to it."

Dr. Brooke, (in his soft Southern voice), "This happened, sah, at a time where of the memory of man runneth not to the contrary."

Professor Hare, (rubbing his luxuriant locks), "Now people there was once a time when long hair was fashionable, but people, I do not believe it would do for that fashion to return."

Professor Holden, (in a confidential tone of voice), "That's the way, young men. Women are all alike."

Simeon Smith, (with a bored-to-death air), "Don't you know we teachers just pine for humor? If you have any in you, please show it in your themes."

Dean Hogg:—"The author handles that subject very well."

CULLED FROM A STUDENT'S NOTE BOOK.

Homer is not supposed to have lived. He wrote the Iliad and Odyssey.

Dr. Barbe and Professor Patterson in unison one morning as they meet Dr. Truscott and five Woman's Hall girls, (Dr. Truscott is carrying a bucket about two by twice), "Where's the picnic going to be?"

Some one has estimated that the amount of hot air turned loose at the preliminary debating contest would raise the temperature of West Virginia to equal that of Cuba.

Reddy Wilkerson, (preparing for the preliminary debating contest), "Say, McD—I'll be d—— if I do not make some of them fellers work for their money!"

FROM THE WOMAN'S HALL COOK BOOK.

To make apple turnovers:—Scrape out the inside of three apples, and place between two flat wads of dough. Sew the edges together and place in a hot oven. Eat two before retiring. About two A. M. turnover.

SHE STUDIES ENGLISH.

A sweet Freshman Co-Ed. entered the Acme Department Store, and approaching one of the male clerks said calmly, "Have you any of those elastic bands capable of being elongated and adjusted at pleasure, and used by the feminine portion of mankind for placing about the lower extremities of their locomotive members, to insure the proper position and the required attitude of the habiliments of their tibias?" The clerk is slowly recovering.

O, Co-ed., in our hours of ease,
Mushy, bald, and easy to squeeze.

Upon the lips he kissed her,
A co-ed, young and meek.
She must have been eating onions,
For he tasted them a week.

Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen
The pen with the Clip-Cap

IT'S A COMFORT TO USE
WATERMAN'S IDEAL FOUNTAIN PEN.

It eliminates the ink bottle from the desk or table, which is generally overcrowded anyway.

It means that much additional room and that much less worry about spilling.

It means freedom, ease and convenience in writing, and the Clip-Cap is a safety device that grips the pocket and also keeps it from rolling off the desk.

Can be used with any kind of ink, but mixing different kinds of anything is never good and a pen is always better off for a steady diet of one kind.

Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen Ink is always the same. Filler's for desk or Traveler's use.
